REGULATORY

Acrylamide
Canada has added acrylamide to the government’s list of toxic substances. The inclusion of the chemical on Health Canada’s toxic list is part of the Canadian government’s ongoing review of nearly 200 chemical substances in widespread commercial use that have never before been subjected to thorough risk analysis. In addition, Health Canada has begun an acrylamide-monitoring program. The first sampling phase will identify which commodities significantly contribute to acrylamide exposure. The Chemical Health Hazard Assessment Division and Food Research Division of the Bureau of Chemical Safety developed the program in consultation with the Biostatistics and Computer Applications Division of the Bureau of Food Policy and Science Integration in Food Directorate. www.hc-sc.gc.ca

General Function Health Claims
The European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) has published its first series of opinions on the list of “general function” health claims compiled by member states and the European Commission. EFSA experts evaluated the scientific evidence for more than 500 claims, helping to inform future decisions of the European Commission and member states on the authorization of health claims. The opinions provide scientific advice on 523 health claims relating to more than 200 foods and food components, such as vitamins and minerals, fiber, fats, carbohydrates, probiotic bacteria, and botanical substances. More on this can be found on the EFSA website at www.efsa.europa.eu by clicking on “news.”
